SUPPLY and DEMAND

Fully Furnished Homes Make
Island Moving a Breeze

It's no secret that moving can be a time-consuming and exhausting process. Unfortunately, the work doesn't end when your belongings are behind a new front door. The true task still lies ahead: how do you begin organizing all that stuff? But what if you only had to bring your favorite swimsuit and a few family photos? If you purchase a second home or lease a long-term rental on the Islands, there are plenty of fully furnished options to make your next move seamless and simple.

In Hawaii, houses are often purchased as part-time residences, vacation homes, or as rental property investments, and it's an important and a significant expectation for the buyer that the home be sold furnished. Additionally, the Islands are an ideal market for furnished homes because buyers from the mainland are not likely to have personal items shipped over and therefore, want furnishings readily available. While a primary residence is often decorated with heirlooms, personal collections, and other sentimental decor, this is rarely the case with a secondary home. So local interior designers and Realtors create interior styles that appeal to a variety of buyers and renters.

When outfitting a fully furnished home, it's imperative to think of all the details. That's when specialty interior companies shine. Ultimately, no matter which materials or colors are utilized, filling a house with furniture and accessories provides a potential buyer with the vision of a home. It's no longer an empty space with potential—the space has realized its potential. So whether the furnishings in a home are provided for rental purposes or included as part of a sale, it can be beneficial to include them. If you are considering selling your second home or high-end luxury estate, keep in mind that fully furnished properties garner extra attention. So out with your old, and in with your new. ■

Luxury Home Magazine Hawaii chats with Big Island Realtor Renée H. Kraft about interest rates and if waiting for them to drop before making your next move is a good idea.

LHM: Why are so many potential home buyers hesitant to move to their dream home in Hawaii?

Renée: A lot people are waiting for interest rates to drop for fear they will pay proportionately more than their current living or investment property. This short-term thinking may cost them more in the long run.

LHM: Why would someone to buy their Hawaii dream home now?

Renée: In real estate, timing makes all the difference. Here is why:

1. Current buyers will face much less competition. By acting promptly, you can have a wider selection to choose from and potentially negotiate better terms.
2. When interest rates finally do drop, there will likely be a surge of buyers entering the market. This increased demand can quickly tip the scales in favor of sellers, transforming the current buyer's market into a seller's market. By purchasing before the rates decrease, you can avoid the fierce competition and potentially negotiate more favorable terms, as we saw just a couple years ago.
3. While it is likely rates will come down, recognize rates could go even higher. Our clients are hedging the market now to protect themselves from potential future rate increases.

LHM: Where are interest rates going from here?

Renée: Of course, nobody knows exactly. However, while interest rates may be high at the moment, they are likely to decrease in the future. Savvy lenders understand this trend and may offer options for a free, no-cost refinance when rates eventually drop. By taking advantage of the current market conditions, you can secure your dream property and still have the opportunity to refinance at a lower rate down the road.

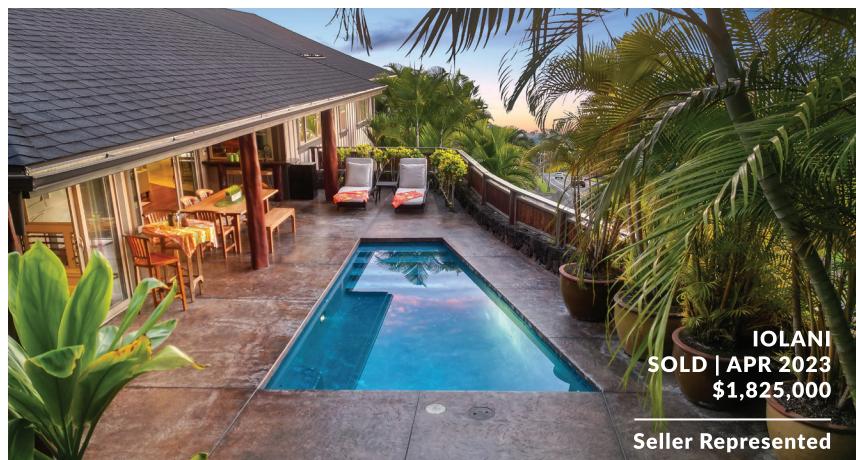

LHM: What strategies are your clients using?

Renée: There are few things our clients are taking advantage of while others sit on the sidelines:

1. Our clients are negotiating points and interest rate buydowns. When interest rates are high, buyers have the opportunity to negotiate with sellers to offset the impact of these rates. One option is to request that the seller pay points on your behalf, which effectively lowers your interest rate. This strategy, known as an interest rate buydown, allows you to enjoy a reduced rate during the initial years of homeownership, providing substantial savings.
2. Our clients are able to take advantage of capitalizing on potential appreciation. Remember, real estate is generally an appreciating asset—it matters what you pay for it. Waiting for interest rates to drop may mean missing out on potential price appreciation. The property value gain could lead to significant financial gains, even if you initially paid a higher interest rate.
3. While it is likely rates will come down, recognize rates could go even higher. Our clients are hedging the market now to protect themselves from potential future rate increases.

LHM: So, what is the bottom line?

Renée: While waiting for interest rates to drop may seem like a prudent strategy, the current real estate market presents unique opportunities that should not be overlooked. Don't let high-interest rates deter you. Each of our client situations is different. There are many more strategies we explore with our clients. We can help position our clients for the long run. ■

A rare and remarkable one-of-a-kind offering.

THE DOUBLE HOMESITE WITH ONE-OF-A-KIND HOUSE PLANS. $3.95M
SEVEN BEDROOMS / EIGHT FULL BATHS & THREE HALF BATHS

For Hapuna Estates, obtain the Developer's Public Report for a Condominium required by Hawaii law and read it before signing a binding sales contract. No federal or state agency has judged the merits or value, if any, of these properties. This does not constitute an offer to sell or a solicitation of any offer to buy where prohibited by law.

AT THE BELOVED MAUNA KEA RESORT

Considered the most sacred of the island's five volcanoes, Mauna Kea's summit is the highest in all Hawaii. Quite naturally, ancient Hawaiian law reserved visits to the peak for only the highest-ranking nobles. In keeping with this tradition, the most spectacular property at the resort is at the highest elevation, on the golf course, with expansive ocean views. Express your interest in this double homesite, which is offered with visionary architectural plans.
