If architecture is a language and the built form its voice, then a great architect is, ultimately, a master storyteller. 29 Kolonahe is evidence of such mastery from architect Ron Radziner, co-founder of renowned firm Marmol Radziner. This upcountry Maui home, built by legendary craftsman John Cahill, is an enduring, livable work of art—and Marmol Radziner's first house in Hawaii. At the edge of a dramatic tropical valley, a triad of structures rises from an impeccably landscaped garden: main house, art studio and office, and carport and music studio. Glass, cedar, and honed lava playfully direct sunlight throughout the day—from its morning appearance to its dramatic sunset finale.
